Home Business

Group to Meet

Wave 8 Nov 1984

After the Excellent response at the Home Business Seminar held in October at the Homestead it was decided that local Home Business owners would like to meet on a regular basis. The first meeting will be on Thursday, Nov. 15 at 4:00 p.m. in the County Commission Room in the courthouse.

At this first meeting business plans will be discussed and participants will begin to write a business plan for their current or proposed business. Business planning worksheets obtained from the Small Business Development Program in New Hampshire will be used. There are worksheets for service related and manufacturing operations.

Anyone that is interested in starting a home based business or is already operating a home based business is invited.

This is an educational program sponsored by the Wasatch County Extension Service, phone 654-3211 for further information.

Home Occupations Questioned by Heber City Council

By Janice Eberhardt
Wave Staff Writer

11-21-84

In his opening remarks at Heber's City Council Meeting, Daniel Bates asked that the council make prudent and wise decisions for the community.

One issue that the city council could not make a clear-cut decision on was the conditions that warranted people involved in home occupations to get business licenses.

Verna Sweat has been diligent in her efforts to resolve her situation as side-line wedding caterer who was informed by the city that she would need a business license to continue such work. She was advised by Nola Jones to come before the city council to discuss the matter before going to the Board of Adjustments. She also talked with Phil Wright of the Health Department to see if she needed a Food Handler's Permit and was told that she didn't.

When Mrs. Sweat appeared before the council Wednesday night she asked, "where do you draw the line" between a full-fledged business and those who are just making money on the side of their regular jobs. She said that it was "unfair" for her to be singled out in operating without a business license.

"I'm not the only person in this valley making money on the side. Unless everybody has to get a license, why should I?" Mrs. Sweat asked. Then she went on to mention several home occupations, some "quite lucrative," in which people were making money without licenses: bookkeepers, music teachers, craftsmen, baby tenders and even night crawler vendors.

Mayor Furner admitted that there was indeed a nebulous line between a full time business and those less than full time. He said the only "fair way to figure it would be by gross revenues generated." The mayor then turned the issue over to councilman Scott Wright, who is a member of Wasatch County Association of Business to solicit its response. But ultimately, according to another member of the Association, the issuing of business licenses is a legal function of the city.

Councilman Louis Jackson brought up the topic of child-care as a home occupation. He said the Department of Social Services regulates the limit of "no more than three children beyond family members" to be in a home at one time. The city did not need to establish a separate ordinance for this situation. Those wanting to exceed this statewide limit would be referred to Family Daycare Standards.

Mr. Jackson also brought up the subject of additions on nonconforming buildings saying that they can be done providing the nonconforming building has a building permit and the addition conforms to building ordinances.

Palmer Hyde tried to interest the council in the installation of an "energy saving flue damper and programable thermostat" on one of the city's furnaces. The council said the dog pound used "a great deal" of propane fuel and would consider the installation of a trial "energy saver" there, providing that the unit could be converted to propane fittings.

Rick Robbins persuaded the council to purchase lifesaver medical record cards for city employees. The wallet-sized cards contain microfilm with the bearer's complete medical record in event of an emergency. It informs paramedics and doctors of victim's next of kin, allergies and can also authorize emergency treatment for minors.

Business licenses were issued to a physical therapist, an appliance and refrigeration service, Coast to Coast Hardware, Cheyenne and Associates (a home interior retailer) and to Hylander Motel, pending inspection.

The council voted to place a 1/4 page ad in the Utah Wing to support the Civil Air Patrol. It also accepted a bid for the sale of a surplus Massey Ferguson tractor.
